

Elijah The Tishbite (None)

The story of the Old Testament holy man and prophet, Elijah written in novel form and told from the first person perspective of Obadiah, a minor player in the Biblical account who is given a larger role in this novel as a witness to the people and events of the story. Obadiah is the narrator of this story and a secret follower of Elijah the prophet, whose mission from God is to lead the king and people of Israel back from the apostate worship of false gods, to the righteous worship of the One True God of all Creation. The insecurities and fears of King Ahab are greatly explored and detailed in this story, along with the trials and tribulations of Elijah, from the strongest moments of his great miracles to his weaknesses and fears of retaliation and persecution by Queen Jezebel. Elijah's story comes to represent both the strengths, weaknesses and ongoing struggles of modern day Christians and provides insight into their ongoing walk with God. This novel is written in an appealing, semi King James sounding style which succeeds in carrying forth the pleasing majesty of the old King James Bible, but is lighter and easier to read and understand the old Kings English style of writing. Main characters: Elijah: The strange Holy Man and prophet from the eastern land of Tishbite who appears at the palace of the apostate King Ahab with a bold prophecy of impending disaster for the kingdom of Israel. A homeless vagabond in appearance dressed in poor animal skins, Elijah appears as a man that one would normally dismiss as unfit for human society, a man not right in his own mind, and at home only in the harsh wilderness from where he appeared. Elijah begins his mission by bringing King Ahab's land of Israel to its knees with a prophecy of drought only to disappear into the night as strangely as he arrived. In the forthcoming years, Elijah remains uncaptured by the King's forces, reappears to challenge the false prophets of the kings wife, Queen Jezebel, to chastise and warn King Ahab of further prophetic judgments and establishes himself many times over as the true prophet of God, sent by divine mission to bring his king and countrymen back to the true worship of the true God. King Ahab: The apostate king of Israel, decadent and evil but ever doubtful and aware and worried of his distance from the true God of his chosen people. Ahab lives in a constant struggle between his love the things of the carnal world and his inner knowledge of the things God, vacillating weakly between the two, and forever drawn back to the carnality of the fallen world by his beautiful Queen Jezebel. Queen Jezebel: The beautiful foreign princess now married Ahab, the king of Israel. With the help of Serug, her mentor and high priest of the false god Baal, Jezebel is in a constant struggle to establish and expand the worship of Baal in the land of Israel. She leads the apostate King Ahab to persecute the people of God cruelly and bears special venom for Elijah, forever fearing in her heart that he may truly represent a god greater than Baal. Jezebel seeks Elijahs life and leads the great prophet into a time of doubt and cowardice and as his fears of her persecution become stronger than his faith in God. Beerah: The strong, arrogant and soldierly captain of the King Ahabs guard, responsible for the kings safety and never failing in his duties. Beerah is not a godly man but witnesses the power of Gods many miracles worked through the holy man Elijah and becomes increasingly torn between the undeniable power of God over the carnal world of fallen men, and his duties toward the palace of the king. Obadiah: The head of Ahabs palace servants and narrator of this story. Obadiah is a godly man living amidst ungodly rulers, struggling against his fears of persecution, fearful and discreet about discovery of his fellowship with Elijah, and forever struggling with guilt over not being more forthcoming and honest about his disdain for Baal and worship of God.
